Mixed reactions greet redistricting approval

BY TRACI BONNEY

The Hancock County redistricting plan, approved May 15, is causing mixed reactions locally.

The plan, among the first county plans in the nation to receive Justice Department approval, moves 628 Diamond-head residents from District 3 to District 5, as well as moving 420 people from Rocky Hill and Dedeaux communities from District 3 to District 5.

The county's five supervisors have reacted in character with their original stances on the matter. Board president and District 2 Supervisor Ronald Cuevas said, "We're very happy the plan has been approved."

Meanwhile, District 3 Supervisor Lisa Coward, who opposed the plan, commented, "What can I say? What's done is done. I did what I could, but it's done."

District 5 Supervisor Mike Ladner was reluctant to address the matter at first, but finally said, "I think it's fair to the whole county that the Justice Department approved the plan that was submitted."

District 4 Supervisor Wilmer Seymour said, "I think the county has been blessed to have our redistricting plan approved. Any time you redistrict, some people are dissatisfied, but I think the approval shows the county is working, that we did our homework."

"We did what the law required us to do."

District 1 Supervisor Robert Peterson stated, "I think it was a fair redistricting plan that was submitted. We'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Peterson's last remark referred to the possibility of a lawsuit being filed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Elaine Barnes, president of the Hancock County chapter of the NAACP, said earlier in the week that a lawsuit was likely.

The group submitted a protest to the Justice Department, along with a proposed redistricting plan that would run district lines east to west and place Bay St. Louis, Waveland and Pearlinton in one district. The group is awaiting the department's response.

According to the 1990 census, less than 10 percent of the county's population is black; however, running district lines east to west would put about 90 percent of that population into one district, according to J.C. Seal and Edward Fernandez, members of the Committee for a Better Hancock County.

The Committee for a Better Hancock County was formed several weeks ago to protest the supervisors' redistricting plan.

Fernandez, also a Diamond-head resident, said members of the resort community will support efforts to force a new redistricting plan.

Drainage problems in Idlewood voted priority

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

The Waveland Board of Aldermen unanimously approved a motion Wednesday to make Idlewood Subdivision flooding a priority among its list of drainage problems.

The Reverend Ron Skinner, on behalf of the subdivision, appealed to the board for help, citing the dangers of high street waters and swift currents.

Skinner explained "the only access route, into and out of the community" was flooded during and following rains to such an extent that emergency services could be denied to the residents at those times.

Skinner said the rain waters flowed into the subdivision from two areas, Hwy. 90 and along its west boundary.

City attorney Lucien Gex told the Idlewood residents that the subdivision was a catch basin for the rains, which ran off the higher county land along the west boundary.

Gex said there was a question as to whether this was a natural or created condition.

Idlewood resident Tim Whitworth told the board it was only within the past few years that the subdivision suffered such heavy flooding. Supposedly, the waters running off the land along the west boundary contain a high sand content, clogging the drains.

He also claimed that the property owners of the adjoining county land had altered the natural water flow, causing the subdivision to flood.

Gex asked Whitworth if he could verify that.

Whitworth said he could, adding that he and former Mayor John Longo were present when the former land owner Jack Hood admitted to making the alterations. Whitworth said

Tanker loses control

Clyde W. Lassabe, a driver for Gulf South Petroleum, reported to Waveland police that at 12:30 p.m. Thursday he was driving down Central Avenue towards Nicholson Avenue when a brown car veered into his lane. Lassabe said he swerved to avoid a collision, lost of control of the tanker and hit a tree. The front windshield was smashed out of the cab. Waveland patrolman Steve Garber said Lassabe was walking away from the tanker when they and a Waveland Fire truck had arrived at the scene. Lassabe was transported by Mobile Medic to Memorial Hospital at Gulfport, where he was treated and released. Mike Pernicaro worked three hours with two wrecker winches to move the back right tires from where they hung over the Mollers Drive drainage easement. (Echo staff photos by Jacqui Cochran)

Bayou Phillips residents discuss street problems

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Approximately 50 residents of the Bayou Phillips area were reassured Thursday night that their particular problems are of importance to the county.

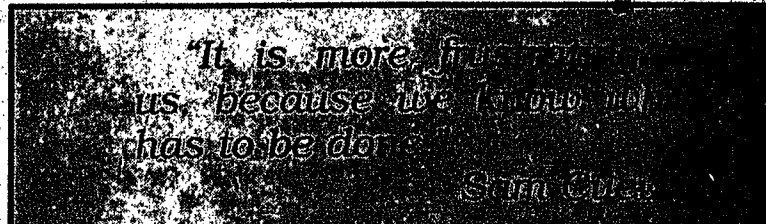

Beat 4 Supervisor Wilmer Seymour and Road Maintenance Supervisor Sam Cuevas spoke to the group about the county's inability to do work until the weather clears.

Cuevas said, "It is more frustrating to us, because we know what has to be done."

Cuevas explained that though the rains have kept his crews from working, the county has continued to accumulate materials. "We have stockpiled culverts and clay gravel. We are just waiting to do the work."

Throughout the two hours of discussion, Cuevas continued to reassure the residents that once the weather clears up the residents will see a difference.

hump, cars cannot see what is approaching from the opposite side. Several incidents were related about near-deaths and accidents.

Seymour was called on to answer concerns about can be done to lower the Spruce Street bridge.

The problem is that the bridge was built with a high center elevation. Because of the

One resident implied that the bridge is a launch for speeding thrill-seekers, with the description: "They fly through over the bridge, becoming airborne on the other side."

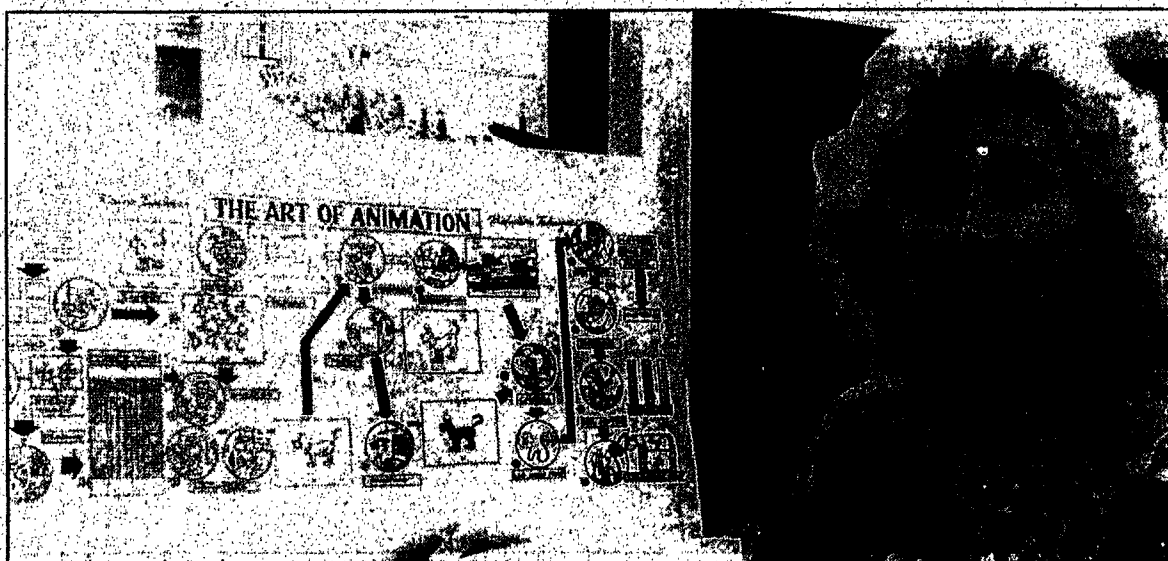

The danger to an approaching car was one of the problems involving the bridge. The problem involved the asphalt connecting the concrete top of the bridge with the incline. With every rainfall the area is crumbling away and causing a gap upon which cars are smashing.

Martin DeSalvo, the coordinator of Bayou Phillips Neighborhood Watch Group and organizer of that night's gathering, spoke of several incidents where the bridge has caused front end damage to vehicles.

The county is exempt from liability by state law when a road is damaged on a public roadway.

Seymour said the county filled the void with gravel and he has personally kept a close eye on the Spruce Street

Loesch: Persistence pays

BY TRACI BONNEY

Lots of questions and a love of her work brought former Pass Christian resident Margaret Loesch to her current position: president of Fox Broadcasting Children's Network.

Loesch, who spoke to students at Coast Episcopal elementary and high schools Thursday and Friday, said she started her career in children's programming in a very simple way: "Frankly, I just needed a job."

After graduating from Coast Episcopal High School, she went to California in 1971 and began job hunting. Having worked in a brokerage during college, she knew she did not want to do that, and television seemed exciting and challenging at the time.

"I went to the networks and asked if they had any management training programs. In the early 1970's, they weren't hiring women in management positions."

However, ABC did have an opening for a clerk. Loesch took the job, and began learning about all the facets of television production. At the end of the work day, she visited the various departments and asked lots of questions.

"I got a series of promotions because of that, just from all the people I'd met," she said. "When

County recycling puts money in budget

BY TRACI BONNEY

Bicycles, appliances and other large pieces of metal are being turned into dollars for the county under a recycling program implemented recently.

County road and maintenance superintendent Sam Cuevas said the county recently installed a container at the Standard landfill which is used for bicycles, appliances and other large metal items brought to the landfill. A machine is used to mash these items, which are then recycled, along with aluminum cans and other metal.

Clarification

In a Waveland Board of Alderman meeting, Shane Anderson was referred to as the source of complaint by three men.

Three men complained of drainage problems during the May 7 meeting, but only one man specifically referred to Anderson's filling in his ditch.

It was also reported that Anderson had filled in his ditch "several years ago." According to Anderson, it was several months ago.

The Sea Coast Echo regrets the error.

"We had been recycling and wanted to use it as a starting point for expanding into recycling appliances," Cuevas explained.

The venture is not a colossal money-maker for the county; however, it has brought in about $700 so far. This money is put back into the landfill budget. What is not put into the landfill is the items that were recycled.

"This program serves several purposes," Cuevas stated. "It expands the life of the landfill by keeping it from filling up as quickly, and also preserves the environment."

"In addition, it puts a little money back into the county budget, instead of taking money out of it."

Cuevas said he plans to set up volunteer recycling centers at the county's three convenience centers. People will be able to bring recyclable items to the centers instead of having them taken to the landfill.

Correction

In the May 23 listing of candidates for county elections, Ola Eugene Ladner was incorrectly listed as a candidate in the District 2 supervisor's race. He is running in District 5.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

I noticed a news release in the mail on Friday reporting five Mississippi counties being added to the disaster area list approved by President Bush last week.

Approval for disaster assistance will be available to the five counties, which include Harrison and Pearl River.

It is hard to believe that Hancock is not among the counties approved as we have had our share of damages from the excessive rains and flooding.

I am glad that assistance was requested for Hancock County's farmers by our Board of Supervisors this past week.

Many of us city folks are not really aware of how much income in this county is still generated by farming.

Watermelons, oats, soybeans, corn, wheat and hay are big ticket items in this county.

Some of these crops also support other farm operations such as beef cattle and dairy farming.

Local truck farmers have also been hit hard because they have also been unable to get their crops in the ground and growing because of the excessive rains.

I am hoping for the farmers' sakes that Hancock County will also receive a disaster declaration.

Hopefully the supervisors' request will be heard.

Tomorrow we will celebrate Memorial Day, as Americans all across this nation will be doing.

The Bay and Waveland American Legion Posts will hold special Memorial Day ceremonies in memory of our departed veterans.

The Bay St. Louis Legionnaires, Auxiliary members and guests will meet at 10 a.m. at the grave site of Clement R. Bontemps, in St. Mary Cemetery, Necaise Avenue.

Following a service at the cemetery, there will be a Post Everlasting ceremony following at Post No. 139's home on Green Meadow Road. A reception will follow.

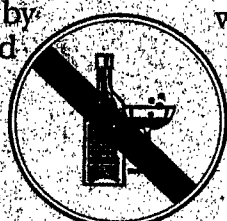

In Waveland, retired Brigadier General Wallace E. Farragut is scheduled to be the guest speaker for Memorial Day ceremonies which are scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. at the Bourgeois-Stieffel-Ray American Legion Post No. 77's home on Coleman Avenue.

Many of you may remember that General Farragut at one time served as the commander of the local National Guard Unit.

The general public is invited to attend the Memorial Day ceremonies at both celebrations.

Let's Honor the Americans Who Died For Their Country, Not the Ones Who'll Die For a Drink

This Memorial Day, let's not confuse the freedoms Americans live by—cause death and destruction on the road. There's drinking and driving.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Say thanks to veterans by volunteering your time

Dear Editor:

On April 23, a banquet and awards ceremony was held at the Coast Coliseum honoring the hundreds of volunteers who donate their time, talents, and in some cases, financial assistance, to all eligible veterans, both inpatients and outpatients, of the VA Medical Centers in Gulfport and Biloxi. Approximately 400 volunteers attended.

Clement R. Bontemps Unit 139 members attending were Hazel Breland, Lou Wilkerson, Evelyn Burns, Genevieve Cole (who received an award for 10,894 hours and 50 years of service), Clara Arnold (who received an award for 1,000 hours), Jackie Bufkin, Lucille Boudreaux, Mammie Carver, Phyllis Moran, Ursula Favre, Billie Tudury, Roz Weathers, Oris Planchard, Pat Wilson and Janet Aime.

Also attending were Hugh Sanford, Dena Bissette, Edna Vassalli and Edward Weathers. Volunteers at these medical centers are vital, now more than ever before. Government cut-backs are taking their toll in the availability of medical care for our veterans, and the volunteer can make the difference. The staffs at the medical centers are to be commended for the jobs they do, but sadly to say, the funds have to be there also.

Volunteers take up the task and try to close as much of the gap as they can that is left by the government.

It appears that we live in a country under a government that doesn't think twice about spending a few trillion dollars on sophisticated military equipment or handing it out on a silver platter to a foreign country, (even those who hate Americans and force us into a battle for freedom, not ours but theirs). I have no quarrel with this, except when it appears that "they" (our government) have forgotten one important factor, which is, our men and women who actually fought those battles and made the sacrifices.

A promise was made to our veterans by our government, a promise: that their battle wounds would not go unattended. That promise doesn't stand for much today and will stand for less tomorrow. The less often a war, the more often the needs of the veteran; of past wars, is not considered. This can be verified by seeing the lengths a veteran must go to prove his/her case to get the help they were promised and also by the cut-backs in medical care funding at the VA hospitals.

I am urging all of you who can to volunteer at the local VA hospitals. You do not have to be a member of a veterans organization to do so.

Anyone who cares and has a loving heart is most welcome. I also urge you to write your U.S. Congressmen telling them to support any legislation that will help the veteran and to do everything in their power to stop any further cutbacks in medical assistance.

I ask that you do not forget the debt owed to the veteran. By volunteering your time you are saying "thank you" in the very best way. Even if we can not stop our government from forgetting the veteran, we must not forget.

Congress must curtail runaway spending habits

Dear Editor:

As one of your readers, I want to urge you in the strongest terms possible to increase your coverage of the fact that for every new dollar that Congress has raised this year in new taxes, it has increased spending by $1.78.

As Reader's Digest reported, the budget and new taxes are a sham. Last year Congress increased the American people's taxes, and the news media told us we should go along with their "deficit reduction" package. They included tax increases for every American because we had to "balance the budget." But in the end, they just wanted to take more of our income in taxes.

In the name of deficit reduction, they enacted the second largest tax increase ever and then turned right around and increased spending by $111 billion—pushing the deficit to a new record.

It was the clearest case ever of false advertising. And, as they demonstrated when they destroyed Gramm-Rudman and the other controls on spending, Congress never intended to reduce the deficit or control wasteful spending.

Tragically, the American people and the news media bought the "this budget is a

Time to look again at justice reform

It's time for another look at Mississippi's civil justice system.

A five-year study commissioned by the American Law Institute has just concluded that the present liability system penalizes businesses by permitting inconsistent and sometimes excessive damage for non-economic losses.

Two years ago, the Mississippi Legislature, at the prodding of the state's business community, enacted meaningful civil justice reforms.

But other changes seem to be needed. The recommendations from the nationally acclaimed

American Law Institute include these changes:

—Awards for pain and suffering would be available only for severely injured plaintiffs.

—Juries would be provided a scale setting dollar amounts for specific injuries when determining damages.

—Juries would not be allowed to consider a company's overall wealth when determining punitive damages awards.

—Compliance with a court judgment and order would be considered a factor in determining awards and a guarantee against punitive damages.

Cameron seeks Hancock superintendent's position

W.J. CAMERON

W.J. Cameron, assistant to the Bay St. Louis-Waveland school district superintendent, officially announces his candidacy for Hancock School System Superintendent of Education.

A teacher and administrator in the Bay St. Louis-Waveland school district for 31 years, Cameron holds a bachelor of science degree in business administration, a master's degree in guidance and an AAA degree in administration from the University of Southern Mississippi.

Cameron, a Hancock County native and Bay St. Louis resident, has 32 years of experience in education as a classroom teacher, coach, guidance counselor, junior high principal and assistant administrator. While serving as principal, he dealt with budget, transportation, building programs, maintenance, public relations and other matters.

Working as a guidance counselor enhanced his ability to communicate with parents and students, while he developed skills in all areas of administration while serving as principal.

Cameron initiated the ninth grade basketball and high school tennis programs in the Bay St. Louis-Waveland school system. He began the Assertive Discipline Program in the junior high school (the first in the school system), and was responsible for adding Algebra I and French I to the eighth grade curriculum and computer literacy to the seventh and eighth grade curricula.

Cameron said in announcing his candidacy, "Serving as assistant to the superintendent has provided me with the opportunity to gain considerable insight into the overall operation of the school system. I believe the experience I have acquired as assistant to the superintendent and my ability to work with all people will enable me to bring cohesiveness, integrity and the knowledge to improve the opportunity for all students to secure a future of their choosing to the Hancock County School System."

bridge erosion problem during these past weeks of rain.

Cuevas said the erosion would be permanently repaired on the bridge as soon as the weather allowed time for cement to be poured and set.

The bridge became the priority of the evening when the residents requested the high bridge be torn down and a level structure replace it.

In answer, Seymour explained the difference between county funds and federal funds. "We cannot go into a hole like the federal government. We have to balance at the end of the year."

"This year we are going to operate on the same budget as last year with a one mill increase, and that is for workmen's compensation which we did not have until now."

He said there were no funds available for the county to spend $30,000 to $40,000 on a new bridge.

Someone asked if the road could be built so that a gradual incline like a ramp might allow more height upon approach and increase visibility.

Cuevas and Seymour agreed that they would look for a possible alternate solution.

The group pressed Seymour on the subject of the Spruce Street bridge until he said that "come budget time, I will do all I can for a new bridge."

"I am only one, it takes three to do anything," Seymour reminded the residents.

DeSalvo, acting as the informal chairman of the meeting, spoke to the room about the unit system, calling it a failure.

DeSalvo reminded everyone that prior to the unit system each district had a supervisor with a road crew. If a problem existed in the area, a resident could call that district's supervisor and the supervisor could personally take his crew and see that the work was done.

From the back of the room someone yelled, "What's the difference. It wasn't fixed before."

DeSalvo continued, saying the unit system deprives the individual district from direct results through their supervisor.

Cuevas and Seymour sat quietly listening as DeSalvo finished speaking and then Cuevas asked if he could reply.

Cuevas said he was unaware that he was invited that night to discuss the unit system.

He said the unit system was chosen as a means to provide more services with less cost and as of yet, has not had enough time to prove that it works.

Throughout the meeting complaints of problems in existence for two, four, 10 years were cited repeatedly.

Seymour took his turn at addressing the unit system question saying, "It was voted in, not once but twice. We got to try and make it work."

He said he was one man who had to work with four others. His main job, he explained, was controlling the budget, "making ends meet."

It was pointed out that when a resident calls Seymour with a problem, Seymour makes out a work order and turns it in to Cuevas.

Cuevas told the residents that if they had a problem they could call his office directly and he would respond, "maybe not in a few minutes, but we will get back to you."

Residents complained of incompetent workers, saying they lean on their shovels daydreaming; they leave behind piles of cuttings and tree limbs along the streets when cleaning; they begin jobs and never finish them, moving onto another area; and they cut grass on one side to return to cut on the other side of the street two weeks later.

DeSalvo interjected that he would like to see the workers get a raise, equating lack of enthusiasm with lack of incentive.

Cuevas defended his workers saying, "I'm proud of my crews. They are hardworking. They never hesitate to come out at night or on a weekend for an emergency."

He explained that he had four road crews to cover the entire county and those four crews gave him their best work.

Cuevas asked that the people give them a chance to see what could be done. "When we get the weather, I promise we'll get the work done."

Residents also questioned the possibility of establishing a zoning ordinance following complaints of people living in a tent with no sewerage facility and criticism of barroom patrons driving drunk from within a residential area of the community.

There was also discussion on what was to be done with more than an acre of land at the end of Washington Street donated to the community for a park.

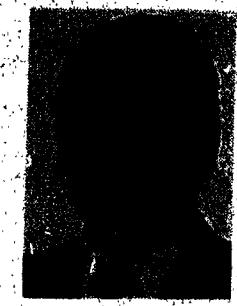

Seymour again cited lack of funds in the county recreation department.

Questions were asked on when the area might receive services of sewerage, and when they might have fire hydrants.

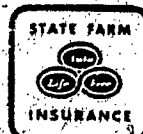

Seymour reminded the residents that the county operates from limited funds. He said, "No one wants to pay higher taxes."

Residents described the spot flooding which occurred along streets following heavy rains and during high tides, citing low areas as the problem.

"Count on me to provide the best Homeowners insurance value in town."

I urge you to expand your coverage and report important facts such as:

—Congress enacted the second largest tax increase in history;

—Congress increased spending by $111 billion;

—Congress enlarged the deficit by $100 billion to an all-time record of $320 billion for FY 1991 alone;

—Congress pushed the national debt to a new record and increased the annual interest payment on the debt to a staggering $254 BILLION; and,

—Congress destroyed the Gramm-Rudman Deficit Reduction Act and all other effective controls on future congressional wasteful spending.

As Citizens Against Government Waste has pointed out repeatedly, we have this skyrocketing deficit today not because of the recession but because Congress refuses to stop its reckless spending. Unless we get Congress' runaway taxes and wasteful deficit spending under control we will all be in very, very serious trouble very soon. I urge you to give more coverage to this all-important story. Thank you.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

Editor's note: This article is the second of a three-part series on race relations in the Catholic Church.

If fact, so strong are the multiple and sinfulness and defects of the Church that a principal argument for the Church's divine origin and guidance is that only a divinely founded institution could have survived the earthy, vicious vices of so many of its members down through two decades of centuries. No merely human institution in the history of humankind has so survived, endured and even prospered through it all.

Thus it is that this tainted history of the Church states nothing more than what we know of any human institution which acquires a measure of power.

Check your history, and you will find that the abuses which you listed are not peculiar to the Catholic Church, but rather tend to be inherent, in varying degrees, in virtually all civil and ecclesiastical groups of people. There is no doubt that sinners within the Church need converting before those without.

Jesus used many means, even his blood relations, to teach us about the universality of our human sinfulness. It is mind-boggling to reflect that the genealogy of Jesus, the holiest person of all, is stained by David, a sometime lecherous king, and by Tamar, an erstwhile prostitute. A converted hooker, Mary Magdalene, became his best friend.

We are all stained, dysfunctional and in need of the righteousness of God, as Paul assures us. No racial group has a lock on vice, just as no racial or ethnic group has a corner on virtue.

It is clearer than clear that no hands are completely clean on any human being anytime, anywhere, under any circumstances, until the moment when we enter into glory at the end of our journey.

Paul's lot, assuredly better than ours, found him declaring: "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Of these I am the foremost" (1 Tim. 1:15). If it was so with God's holy ones, dare to imagine how it must be with the rest of us, black and white alike.

No hands are clean. Numerous books on slavers and avaricious traders give lurid accounts of the slave trade, with gruesome pictures illustrating the inhuman, sardine-like positioning of hundreds of steaming bodies of the writhing, terrified, despairing chattel. Some twenty percent of the poor wretches were destined not to escape lethal sickness, storms and the ever-pursuing sharks.

The most comprehensive, yet summary, treatment of the slavery era is found in the major encyclopedias which shock us by accounts of instances of slavery in Central America before the advent of Europeans. Yes, not even our native Americans were immune from inflicting the curse of bondage.

More to the point, one of the principal sources of slaves were the native Africans themselves who, thousands of years before the plantation era of cotton and sugar cane, finally stopped slaughtering prisoners of war, but only to make a profit by selling them into slavery. In this inhuman practice, they simply joined the peoples of the Middle East.

In more recent centuries, this same source was supplemented by perfidy and kidnappings of Africans by Africans quite apart from war. All of this is being said, of course, to show that greed for money knows no color. Unfortunately, it is usually true that most people have their price.

As dirty as the hands of white slavers were on account of their avarice, callous brutality and ruthlessness, so dirty were the hands of those blacks who sold their own people down the rivers and across the oceans.

It is a subject which apparently no one wants to confront, but the last time a major periodical such as "Time" magazine reported on it a dozen or so years ago, the slave trade in North Africa and parts of the Middle East was alive and well to the tune of about 250,000 "fortunates" sold annually.

Obviously, no hands are clean. The law of the jungle is still the rule, not the exception, in parts of Africa where tribal warfare is real and deadly in the very news of today, down the labyrinthine ways of Los Angeles and in the sanitized, white-collar inner sanctum of Wall Street.

I agree fully with a newsclipping from "The Capital Spotlight" which states: "A group of scientists from the University of California at Berkeley has completed a study which concludes that the human race had its origins in Africa, and thus all racial groups have an African ancestry." This is consistent with the best scientific findings.

However, that common origin should cement, not separate, the races and ethnic groups of the world. What it does is confirm all that Paul tells us about our condemnation through Adam and our subsequent redemption through Jesus:

"Just as in Adam all die, so too in Christ shall all be brought to life" (1 Cor. 15: 22).

It is all too obvious from sal-

In answer to a question I received from a Bay St. Louis gentleman, I will address this column to the Jewish traditions that are practiced at the time of a death.

Remember, Jewish tradition cherishes life! A Jew should live by the teachings, not die through them. "The dead cannot praise the Lord!"

The Jews are realistic about death. "For dust you are and to dust you shall return. The end of man is death, but the spirit returns to God who gave it."

Death in itself is not a tragedy. The untimely nature of a death or the unfortunate circumstances surrounding such can be tragic. Solomon said, "A good name is better than precious oil; the day of death better than the day of one's birth."

To Jews everywhere, two fundamental principles prevail. One is that the dead must be given the honor and respect due to a lifeless human being, and the second is that there must be concern for the mental, emotional and spiritual well-being of the living mourners; extended comfort must be given them.

The actual burial rites differ between the groups of Jews. To explain, I shall compare some differences between rites practiced by Orthodox and by Reformed Jews.

The Orthodox person is placed in a white robe or shroud. (The Orthodox male body is wrapped in his prayer tallis (a scarf worn for prayers). The ends of the tallis are unknotted to indicate that the man's earthly prayer requirements are no longer incumbent. On the other hand, the Reformed body is clothed in ordinary garments.

At the head of the coffin of a Reformed Jewess are her two Sabbath candles, lit as she would have them lighted for a Sabbath or a Festival.

Orthodox Jews do not embalm; an open casket is forbidden. Burial is as close to the day of death as possible. Reformed Jews do embalm. Jacob was embalmed in Egypt, according to the Bible, as was his son Joseph. (Genesis 50:2-31)

Orthodox frown on cremation as the body must be buried. Reformed Jews can be guided by their own feelings. An Orthodox person is buried in a simple wooden box; Reformed Jews are buried as the mourners desire.

Reformed Jews allow autopsies as a decision to be made by the family. Orthodox Jews will allow an autopsy only if ordered by the government or for research, but all organs must be replaced in the body before burial. Orthodox Jews cannot be buried in a mausoleum as such is away from the earth. On the other hand, many Reformed Jews are interred in mausoleums.

The Mishnah (a treatise on Jewish Biblical law) tells of stopping seven times on the way to the burial site, and seven times on the return trip if there are 10 people. (Ten in Judaism is a "magic" number.)

There must be 10 people for all Jewish traditional ceremonies. Of course this practice, as many others, has differed throughout the history of the Jews and has been greatly debated. It is up to the family to decide if the body is to rest seven times en route to the burial ground. The Orthodox coffin is never covered with flowers, nor are shrubs or flowers ever placed on the grave. Reformed Jews do both. Many Jewish cemeteries are breathtaking, with well-trimmed ivy covering all graves. These plants honor the dead, not the living.

Sending and placing flowers is not, by the way, a Gentile custom, nor is it necessarily a Christian custom. The comfort of flowers is a modern aesthetic spirit which beautifies both Jewish and Christian funerals. Myrtle branches used to be cut to put on the coffin to honor the dead, as mentioned in the Talmud and Old Testament.

Should a woman be buried with her first or second husband? A lot of debate has gone into this problem and continues to today. With Reformed Jews, it's up to the dead's desire, or that of her family. In Orthodoxy, a woman is considered the flesh of her husband (Leviticus 21:2) so is buried with her first husband. However, this remains today an open question among Orthodox authorities.

In the next article on Judaism, I'll discuss the mourners and their traditions. This should help all of us when a Jewish death occurs.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy
McGuire Caire

"Welcome, sweet sunshine" to paraphrase the old song; and welcome indeed were those sunny hours on Thursday and Friday, after rain, rain and more rain.

And, with the sunshine and plans for the Memorial Day weekend, the meat counters at our area supermarkets are busy with chefs choosing their favorite cuts and kinds for the barbecue grill or pit for Monday's Memorial Day Feast!

The markets are equal to the challenge, with the Southern barbecue favorite, pork ribs and other cuts, prominently featured. Small, spare ribs are offered at good prices, as are medium ribs, to suit your taste. Pork loins and quarter loins are also featured, as are chops and roasts.

Chicken leg quarters are their usual good value, as are drumsticks and whole broilers. Chicken breasts are also offered, as are turkey breasts. And, let's not pass up those farm raised catfish fillets or whole catfish beckoning us; grilled catfish is a true delicacy, in my opinion.

Don't pass up that sweet yellow corn crowding the produce bins; roast or grill some corn to go along with your main offering. Fresh snap beans are a good buy, also, as are artichokes, bell peppers and cucumbers and onions and potatoes.

And, to round out the feast, what else but watermelon?

Ever the optimist, I've already responded to the sunshine by "slushing" my way—that's the only way to describe it—across the soggy grass to dry off the grill. And, if the rain comes, I'll just drag out that big old golf umbrella to shield chef and food, and we'll go right on our way! Or, I'll—but let's not borrow trouble; the sun is bright this Friday at noontime at any rate!

Here's a good barbecue sauce for chicken:

1 cup cooking oil
1 pt. cider vinegar
1 tsp. red pepper
Garlic, as you like it
2 Tblsp. salt, optional
(I like to use lots of garlic in this sauce; you may like less.)
Place halved broiler-fryers on grill. Cook for 20 minutes, then start applying the sauce, turning the pieces often and basting with the sauce mixture. Cook until well done, an hour to an hour and a half. During the last half hour, baste the chicken every 5 or 10 minutes. And, please, turn the halves with tongs, not with forks. Don't waste those good juices!

From the Karo Syrup people comes this easier-than-easy "Karo Plus One" formula for chicken: Just mix equal amounts of Karo Light or Dark Corn Syrup plus any one of these: ketchup, mustard, soy sauce or orange juice concentrate. Brush on chicken during last 20 minutes of grilling, broiling or baking. That's all there is to it.

Also delicious with ribs or chops, as well as with ham and burgers. A few days ago, I mixed the dark syrup with jalapeno mustard, for chicken breast quarters, with quite tangy results.

Speaking of mustard, one of my favorite uses is:
GRILLED CATFISH WITH DIJON MUSTARD
4 (5 to 8 oz.) catfish fillets
3 Tblsp. Dijon mustard
Vegetable oil
Pepper, salt to taste

Get your grill heated and ready first. Coat each side of the catfish fillet with three-fourths tablespoon of mustard. Let stand for 30 minutes. Salt and pepper to taste. Place the fish fillets in an oiled basket and grill over hot or high heat for three to five minutes per side and serve at once.

I wonder how these would taste with my favorite of mustards, Creole mustard? Shall have to try that next time!

And, speaking of that good corn, I like to add a little chili powder to the butter for those delicious ears. And, if you've any leftover corn, or if you want to cook some especially for this next dish, it's well worth the slight effort! Here's:

MARINATED CORN SALAD
4 large ears (2 cups) corn kernels, cut from the cob
2 medium bell (green) or sweet red peppers, cut lengthwise into strips
1/2 cup sliced green onions with tops
3 Tblsp. Chablis or other dry white wine
1 Tblsp. minced fresh parsley
2 tsp. red wine vinegar
1/2 tsp. dried whole thyme
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. coarsely ground black pepper
1/8 tsp. garlic powder

Coat a medium skillet with no-stick cooking spray; heat over medium heat. Add corn, green or red pepper and green onion. Saute 10 minutes, or until vegetables are tender, stirring frequently. Add wine, parsley, vinegar, thyme, salt, pepper and garlic powder, stirring to mix well. Cool corn mixture to room temperature. Cover and refrigerate. (Six servings)—from "Southern Living" magazine files.

Happy holiday, come rain or shine!

COOKING UP A STORM

Chocolate-lovers, rejoice! Scientists now tell us that you'll live longer and feel better with chocolate—it's actually GOOD for you!

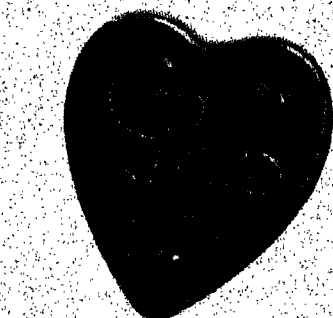

It's true, hurray! Researchers Robert Ornstein, psychologist, and David Sobel, MD, say that chocolate fights dental plaque, for example, also that it lowers cholesterol and chases away the blues! All that and heavenly taste as well!

In their book, "Healthy Pleasures" (Addison-Wesley) the two advise that "while chocolate may not qualify as a leading health food, recent studies indicate that it is not evil incarnate, either."

Studies at Boston's Forsyth Dental Research Institute, they tell us, have confirmed that chocolate even fights decay-causing plaque—and cavities! And, as a banisher of the blues, chocolate has few equals, researchers say. "It's what I call an edible tranquilizer," according to Judith J. Wurtman at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "It will push you from anxiety to an increased ability to relax and concentrate."

I like the findings in this book, don't you? And, you'll like the following recipe, a favorite of our family over the years. It's from the well-known "River Road Recipes" published by the Junior League of Baton Rouge, La.

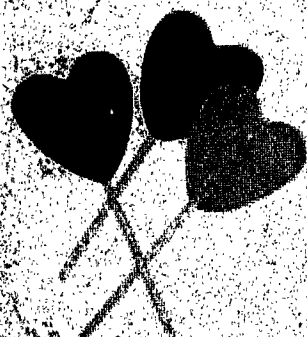

It's an easy recipe, and delicious. Here's:

FUDGE PIE
2 squares bitter chocolate
1 stick butter or margarine
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1/4 sifted flour
Melt chocolate and butter in double boiler. Mix flour and sugar. Beat eggs and combine with flour and sugar. Add chocolate and butter. Put in well-greased 9" pie tin and bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 45 minutes. Serve with topping of ice cream or whipped cream. Will cut into segments like a pie.

For an extra special dessert, cut this pie into small wedges, top with vanilla ice cream and then with hot fudge sauce! (Copyright, 1991, Katharine D. M. Caire) chocolate trigger the release of a chemical—serotonin—in the brain, and serotonin is involved in producing feelings of calmness and sleepiness, as well as a decrease in anxiety, according to the researchers. And, chocolate may even lower the cholesterol levels in the blood, say other researchers at the University of Texas Medical Center in Dallas, and it's a great pick-me-up.

What more can you ask? Just this: Because chocolate is so rich in carbohydrates, chocolate can help diet a love weight and feel energetic at the same time, according to Dr. Helen Guthrie of Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Guthrie and Sobel in their book, it seems that our body could find a balance between the sugar from milk, vegetable oil, salt or honey, and the fat, from chocolate and con-

Oceanographic offices adopt Hancock High club

Edward Danzey, assistant superintendent of Hancock County Schools, and Commander Donald A. Roman, USN, Chief of Staff Officer, Naval Oceanographic Office (NAVOCEANO) signed an Adopt-A-School agreement for the Hancock High School SECME Club May 23.

SECME is the acronym for Southeastern Consortium for Minorities in Engineering.

The SECME faculty advisor at HHS is Suzette Burton, chemistry teacher, who is assisted by Nancy Smith, HHS guidance counselor.

Since its beginning, NAVOCEANO has worked closely with the SECME Club. The NAVOCEANO SECME Club has provided the club with equipment and books and brochures on careers in science, mathematics, and engineering. Today, the club has a large collection of books and materials on careers in science, mathematics, and engineering. The club was established by Eric Labat, NAVOCEANO'S Black Employment Program coordinator, who talked about the work of a mathematician, and how one becomes a mathematician.

Madelyn Petrick, Mary Brown, and Robert Kilroy made a presentation on the deployment, calibration and testing of current meters. The SECME Club toured one of NAVOCEANO's survey aircraft at Stennis Airfield on May 3.

Future plans call for SECME Club visits to NAVOCEANO's engineering calibration laboratory, super computer center, and a survey ship. NAVOCEANO scientists and engineers will also act as mentors and coaches.

SECME was established in 1975 by the dean of a major southeastern university's school of engineering. Today, SECME's program of curriculum enrichment, career development, and linking 25 universities and 60 corporations with 265 schools and 19,400 students in eight southeastern states.

While SECME is open to all interested participants, its primary goal is to increase the pool of minorities who are prepared to enter and complete studies in engineering, mathematics and science.

The program works within the existing educational structure at both the middle and secondary school levels. At each participating school, a SECME team is formed to plan and carry out the program.

A typical team includes the principal, counselor, mediators, and teachers of mathematics, science, and language arts.

The institute is conducted by the SECME staff and a combination of education and engineering faculty, and is designed to help attendees understand SECME's goals, teaching methodology, curriculum enrichment, use the microcomputer as an instructional tool, explain opportunities in the engineering profession, and review requirements for successful college study. Participants work with their school system colleagues, engineering faculty and industry consultants developing an implementation plan for classrooms and coordinating SECME programs in their home schools.

The local SECME program is a grassroots effort and typically has an advisor with the faculty at an engineering school as well as support from community organizations. It raises cash and in-kind contributions from local sources and is often able to provide summer employment in a technical occupation for students.

Student participants are identified, in some cases, as early as the fourth grade. Nominations come from teachers or counselors and include both students who are achieving and those with the potential to achieve.

Overall, more than 85 percent of graduating SECME seniors attend a college or university and almost half of those opt for engineering or other mathematical based programs. SECME, through the Mississippi Coast Association of General Administrators, hopes to expand into other coastal school systems in the near future. SECME programs being sponsored by the University of Mississippi School of

WE REMEMBER

Memorial Day, let's pause a moment from our daily lives...our comfort, our peace and our freedom...to remember the men and women who fought and died so that we may enjoy the privilege of being Americans. Proudly, we honor all the people of our armed forces...from all wars. Their courage was our greatest triumph, their sacrifice our greatest loss.
